Libido is very important aspect of human physiology, multiple factors are responsible for human libido most important are emotional problem related to family problems, work pressure, relationship issues and physical illnesses like diabetes, hypertention etc, also many allopathic drugs can also affect libido very severely leading to sexual dysfunction of different kind.

Let's see some stories

Case1:

A man aged 50 years a known case of chronic renal failure consults me from London for a very unique sexual problem, he is a known case of polycystic kidney disorder with hypertension with chronic renal disease, he suddenly develops erection at un wanted times especially in the early morning in the bed, or after waking or rising every single day which lasts for few hours they are only better by forenoon, he finds this very annoying, he tries to have sex with his wife but wife is in no mood to have sex with him as she has lots of domestic duties to perform early morning, this even has frequent arguments but ultimately he lands up masturbating. He goes to his regular doctor who gives him some tranquilizers but nothing happens hence at last he consults me when I was in London.

One thing which he mentions a big concomitant is that he dislikes eating any food which has fruit in it or even a fruity flavour.

Since was busy giving seminar and had no time for a long case hence I took a very small case with following rubrics

On the days when boy is not there her sexual cravings is in excess, whenever there is a quarrel she goes into a guilt complex thinking the boy is using her sexually, her basic nature is very restless and emotional, she loves to eat cheese sandwiches and is addicted to tea and coffee as she has to work at odd hours.
