HOMOEOPATHY AND TUBAL BLOCKS

The most common cause of sterility in my practice in female is fallopian tube blockage and in male's low sperm count.

I will discuss today fallopian blocks. They are two thin tubes, one on each side of the uterus, which help lead the mature egg from the ovaries to the uterus. When an obstruction prevents the egg from traveling down the tube, a woman has a blocked fallopian tube, also known as tubal factor infertility. This can occur on one or both sides and is the cause of infertility in 40 percent of infertile women.

The most common cause of blocked fallopian tubes is pelvic inflammatory disease (PID). PID is the result of a sexually transmitted disease, also, even if PID is no longer present, a history of PID or pelvic infection increases the risk of blocked tubes.

Other potential causes of blocked fallopian tubes include:

- Current or history of an STD infection, specifically chlamydia or gonorrhoea
- Endometriosis
- History of abdominal surgery
- History of uterine infection caused by an abortion or miscarriage
- Previous ectopic pregnancy
- Prior surgery involving the fallopian tubes

Now let's discuss a case

A lady aged 32 years comes to me after 3 years of 2nd marriage with primary sterility. She was previously married but the marriage lasted only 3 months and then she took divorce ,2 years after the divorce she married again.

Her hystero-salpingography showed blocked tube at the junction of uterus and beginning of fallopian tube on right side 100 % and on left side 70%, she had a past history of ruptured appendix for which she was operated in emergency when she was 19 years old. She suffered from painful menses as a young girl for which she took pain killers regularly, after 2nd marriage the dysmenorrhoea disappeared. Her menstrual cycle was severely affected when she was married for first time as she never got menses. At present, she gets menses regularly on time but the bleeding is copious for 10 days, She gets white discharge from vagina in-between menses, her vagina is dry and needs lubricating jelly for frictionless intercourse, she also sweats more all over the body menses before.

Emotions and life situation

A very fair and good looking women from a very wealthy parents born in Dehradun ,parents had their own share of discords but she took it on her stride and took time off to learn music which she was very sensitive to, she was very attractive and hence boys were after her but she gratified her sexuality with masturbation, at the age of 28 years she was married in a rich family in Delhi to an alcoholic boy immediately she ran back to Dehradun within 3 month .She has a very nervous temperament since childhood making her very anxious and nervous person. She hates flower and any smell coming out from flower, she is very caring by nature and takes good care of her and her in-laws family, she has lot of anger within her regarding first marriage and agony of appendix operation. She fears thunderstorm and she feels very unfortunate about her fallopian blockage.

She loves cold drinks and juicy things any oily food aggravates her.

Based on above symptoms I started with Graphites LM1 in 5 cup method 2 times a day for 15 days followed by thiosinaminum 3x 6 grains 2 times a day for 1 month, after 45 days no result in pregnancy even though there was regular intercourse, emotionally much better less nervous. In next 3 months I gradually increased graphites from LM1 to LM3 2 times a day and alternating it with thiosinaminum 3x, now the menstrual cycle got much better but still no pregnancy, hence higher potency from LM3 TO LM6 of graphites again alternating it with thiosinaminum I did this for next 6 months only to find pregnancy test positive, the gynaecologist felt this was a wrong result hence test repeated 3 times and it was strongly positive the gynec said in his 30 years of practice he never heard of fallopian block opened with homoeopathy.

In the above case thiosinaminum was used as a pathological specific to break adhesions whereas graphites was used to correct over all hormonal and emotional balance.
